The last of the great palaces of India, the exterior of the Umaid Bhawan Palace hotel is an imposing facade for the warm, world-class hospitality that lies within. History and heritage are entrenched within the building itself; the palm court marble used in its construction is the same as that of the Taj Mahal, and even the views are epic—its location atop Chittar Hill means the Palace benefits from views across the "Blue City" of Jodhpur and Mehrangarh Fort.

“Ground-floor rooms are best, as they face a tropical landscaped courtyard. Their internal layout makes the most of a small space, and are like single-bedroom apartments with multi-zoned areas. Rooms open to a wide corridor and the courtyard, with tables for breakfast or tea.”—Ken Yeang

Raffles is not just an iconic hotel, but a Singaporean landmark in its own right. After extensive restoration works, it reopened in 2019 and has retained its signature charm. To step across its teakwood floors, past its charming verandas and through its lush courtyard gardens to the famous Long Bar, is like taking a (glamorous) step back in time.
